USG PERIANAL REGION (PORTABLE)

Clinical Profile: Complaints of pus discharge through small openings in the right posterior perianal region.

Findings:

Highly suboptimal scan due to patient body habitus , limited acoustic window as a result of patient position and also on account of it being a portable study.

There is a linear ill-defined hypoechoic tract seen in the right perianal region extending from the external opening on the skin in the right posterior perianal region . However, its cranial extent is not appreciated in the present USG.

No obvious communication with adjacent anal sphincter /anal canal appreciated in the present USG.

To correlate clinically, with examination findings and further evaluation with post-contrast CT /MRI, if clinically indicated.
